Comments:

With the receipt of reports of polar bears now drowning as a result of drastic climate changes, I feel no need to apologize for approaching the Eastern-ND water needs issue as a defender of whatever water supply approach will produce the very least disruption of the natural order (even if the dollar-cost of that alternative should prove to be ~~higher~~ comparatively higher). Therefore, in order to pursue a genuine win/win strategy, I wholeheartedly support the decision of any water via pipelines exclusively.

Much more than the Red River Valley's economy is at stake. Every person and agency needs to pursue only actions that will result in either no disruption or the least possible disruption of (the delicate web of life on which we all depend).
